

CHECK DRIVE TOWARD RIGA SLAVS CLAIM

PETROGRAD REPORTS THAT HINDENBURG'S ADVANCE ON BALTIC PORT IS HALTED.

BOMBARD BULGAR PORT

Attempt Will Be Made to Divert Part of Bulgarian Force From Serbia—At Various War Fronts.

London, Oct. 23.—The latest official news from Petrograd gives some indication that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's drive toward the Baltic port of Riga, has again been checked and thus nearer the center of the German line, German counter-attack has been repulsed.

Fighting on the left bank of the Dnieper continues, and the Russians assert they have made further captures of large numbers of men. In the Caucasus, lively actions, in which cavalry is taking an important part, are reported. Vienna acknowledges Austrian troops have retired in Galicia, under the pressure of superior Russian forces.

The status of political affairs in the Balkans is almost equal in interest to the military situation. It is believed that neither Greece nor Roumania is likely to enter the war, at least unless the entente allies can gain some decisive success. Greece appears to be more interested in the island of Cyprus and it is feared in Athens that the allied troops have come too late to the Balkan field.

Bombardment of Bulgarian coast by the allied fleet raises hopes in England that the entente powers will not be content with landing troops in Salonika but may use enough of diversion elsewhere to engage a considerable body of Bulgarian troops. It is expected here that the arrival at the Dardanelles of General Sir Ian Hamilton, the new commander of the expeditionary force, will be accompanied with new military activity on the Gallipoli peninsula.

Promise Assistance.
London, Oct. 23.—Rumanian newspapers, as quoted in a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Zurich, say that the Russian General Voinikov asserted:

"A fortnight at the latest Russian troops will land on Bulgarian soil."

General Voinikov, who is Emperor Nicholas' adjutant, is now on his way to Serbian headquarters.

German Advance.
Berlin, Oct. 23.—German troops have crossed the Drina river in northwestern Serbia, near Vukovar, driving southward the Serbians on the heights, according to the official statement issued today by German army headquarters.

It is also announced that Bulgarian troops have captured the Serbian towns of Novi and Rogozica.

Italians Advance.
Brindisi, Italy, Oct. 23.—The Italian squadron is taking part in the blockade and bombardment by the entente fleet of the Bulgarian coast in the Aegean sea, according to a wireless message received here today.

Udine, Italy, Oct. 23.—The Italian army is making a general attack along the whole line from Switzerland to the Adriatic. In the preceding five months of the Austro-Italian war the efforts of the Italians have been directed at the penetration of Austrian territory and capture of strategic points for the purpose of securing Italy against the possibility of Austrian invasion. In the opinion of the Italian general staff this has been accomplished, and the war is now entering its second phase.

It is now estimated here that the Italians have taken 25,000 prisoners during the war, and have put out of action upward of 100,000 men in all. Italian losses, including killed, wounded and prisoners, amount to about 45,000, according to official figures, which is the lowest percentage of any of the belligerent nations.

King Victor Active.
Verona, Italy, Oct. 23.—King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by General Brusati, climbed to the snow covered crest of the mountains here yesterday. The snow was deep and the temperature below zero. The king's trip was made to congratulate the Alpine troops who had just captured several Austrian positions. The ascent was difficult and hitherto has been undertaken only by hardy and experienced mountaineers.

Close Travel Routes.
Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 23.—Germany is again closed from Basel on consequence to travelers of every continent. It is assumed that the German movement of German troops.

ESCAPED OFFICERS ON A GERMAN LINER

Men From German Warship Believed to Be in Hoboken, Ready to Embark—Concerted Effort Suspected

Washington, Oct. 23.—As the result of a conference over the parole breaking of the six warship officers who slipped away from the German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm, a week ago last Monday, government officials said today they were sure the men were now at Hoboken, N. J. aboard one of the big German liners there. The fact that they have come to their attention, they said, warranted the conclusion that there was a general effort to get as many of the men as possible away from interned cruisers.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—Seventeen new clubs have been added during the past year to Wisconsin's list of county or community livestock breeders' associations. These organizations have been formed in many of the counties of the state and are the result of the development of Wisconsin's dairy industry. George C. Humphrey of the college of agriculture, who was the originator of this plan, has seen it copied by many of the leading dairy states of the country.

WAGES OF $14,000 AWARDED TO FARMER FOR LIFELONG WORK

Judge Fifield Allows Claims for Services of Son on Father's Farm for Long Period.

For thirty-eight years Nels Braaten labored and tilled the soil on the farm of his father, Arne P. Braaten, without a cent of compensation aside from his board and the few clothes necessary. It was a rich tract in the town of Spring Valley, one hundred and fifty-five acres in all. Throughout his life Nels Braaten, with his neighbors, he always told that the son would be well provided for when he, the father, died. The son married young and still stayed on the farm with his aged parents, nursing them in their old age. During the last few years both were helpless and in 1911 the older Braaten passed away. Aside from the rich farm in the town of Spring Valley, there was considerable other real estate holdings in Orfordville and at Beloit. The estate was brought up for probate in the county court recently. Braaten, now fifty-seven years old, expected that due to his faithfulness to his father in working the farm for so long a period, would experience no trouble in securing his father's property. Imagine his surprise when he appeared in court and heard a bill drawn unbeknown to him or any other, by his father in 1910, and which left his entire property to his wife, and a portion of whom he had never seen. It was a terrible blow to experience after nearly a quarter of a century of service to the family. The will provided for the son during his life, left a legacy of $500 to the son's wife, but made no provision for her after her husband's death.

Accordingly his attorney entered a claim for $15,800 for services during his thirty-eight years of work. Deposition taken today by the court, the older Braaten's aged wife at the old homestead in the town of Spring Valley several weeks ago. Yesterday prominent and influential citizens and old residents of the township and friends of the older Braaten testified in county court before Judge Fifield regarding conversations with the older Braaten regarding his plans to give the farm to his son on dying.

Subsequently Judge Fifield allowed the claim of $14,000 to the son. With tears in his eyes the man, now well along in middle life, gave thanks.

LA FOLLETTE MAKES HIS ATTITUDE CLEAR

States He Is Neutral As Far as the European War Is Concerned and Is Not Member of Any Committee.

Sheboygan, Wis., Oct. 23.—Senator Robert La Follette in a telegram to the Sheboygan press this afternoon declares he is neutral so far as the European war is concerned. A circular has been received from the national allied relief committee in New York naming Senator La Follette and a score or more of other prominent governors, secretaries, etc., who had become members of the committee this week.

Telegraphic inquiry brought an answer from Karl Davis Robinson, executive secretary of New York, that the committee's vote was for an organization to raise funds, like the war relief fund, for the purpose of raising and distributing relief supplies working in behalf of non-combatants against the allies.

Senator La Follette was asked to confirm the report that he had become a member of any committee and in his telegram he said:

"I accepted a place on the committee under the apprehension that the war relief fund was for the relief of all sufferers from the results of the war. Connection with relief work which is limited to sufferers on one side, is inconsistent with my conviction of neutrality. I have several my connection with the committee."

CORPORATION INCOME TAX SHOWS A SLUMP

LEVY WILL YIELD STATE $230,000 LESS THAN FOR THE YEAR 1914.

DECREASE FOR COUNTY

Corporations in Rock County Are Assessed a Total of $7,541, or $3,553 Less Than Last Year.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—There has been a slight falling off in the income tax assessed against corporations for the year 1915 according to the announcement of the state tax commission today. The total levies against the various counties for collection from corporations within their limits this year aggregate $2,459,638.89 compared with a levy of $2,710,706.61 for the year 1914. This is a decrease of approximately $250,000 on the income corporation tax alone.

State income taxes are collected from two sources—firms and individuals and corporations. The tax on firms and individuals is assessed by the local income tax assessor and certified to the county clerk of the county. The income tax against corporations is assessed by the state tax commission and certified to the county clerk of the state.

It now seems probable that there will be a slight falling off in the grand total levied for the year 1915. Last year the total income tax assessed was $4,146,571.85, of which approximately $1,400,000 was levied against individuals. With a slight falling off in the amount collected from corporations it is probable that there will be a slight decrease in the total assessment.

REFORM IN COURT DECISIONS URGED BY STATE JUSTICE

Too Long and Cumbersome Decisions Fill the Law Books Declares Judge Winslow—Remedy Suggested.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 23.—That too many long opinions are written as decisions of the supreme court of this country and that the decisions of a supreme court like Wisconsin for a single year should be contained in a single volume is the opinion expressed by Chief Justice Winslow in an article in the Illinois Law Review, made public today. Justice Winslow says that he is appalled at the number of decisions and volumes which they fill.

"According to a reliable count," says Justice Winslow, "there was reported during the five years from 1909 to 1913, inclusive, 65,373 decisions made by federal and state courts, of last resort filing 630 volumes."

Justice Winslow says that the law library of the future staggers the imagination as one thinks of the multitude of shelves which will stretch away into the dim distance, rank upon rank, and upon rank, all leading little sympathy for this party movement.

BIG CROWD PRESENT WHEN Y. M. C. A. FAIR OPENS FOR PUBLIC

Large Attendance Last Night.—Beloit Delegation Here This Afternoon and Evening.

The county fair for the benefit of the Janesville Young Men's Christian Association opened at the Auditorium on River street last evening auspiciously. Several hundred people were in attendance to make the opening a success. The big show was on during this afternoon and will continue throughout this evening.

The big rink building was one great glare of blazing lights; gay colored lights of every description, the whole topped off with many pretty girls and a touch of autumn in every corner. Along the Midway, patterned after the gay boulevards of the country fairs, were hundreds of attractions to catch the eye of the visitor and entice him to part with a nickel or a dime for sweet charity's sake.

The hot coffee and honey island red-hot booth proved a hit along towards 9:30 and 10 o'clock, and about twenty yards of "dogs" passed over the counter last night. At this time it was estimated there were about 100 people in the building. Everybody was having a great time and spending money freely. Hustling about among the crowd one could catch an occasional glimpse of the ladies on the committee who originated the affair, with smiles on their faces and beaming entirely with satisfaction.

During this afternoon a big business was done in selling meals for the Sunday dinner. The meat, including roasts, chops, steaks and chickens of the city. Trips through the country by several of the ladies in automobiles were responsible for many dozens of eggs and chickens gratis from the farmers. These sold at a clear profit, were the source of numerous dollars for the association's benefit.

Throughout the ladies have eliminated every needless expense. They have worked hard to make the affair a success in every way. They were highly gratified at the big attendance last evening and expected the number to be tripled during this afternoon and tonight.

The presence of three hundred Beloit Y. M. C. A. members is going to have effect tonight. This afternoon the vanguard of the line of visitors arrived, and aside from getting numerous ideas as to the way of making a fair of their own a success were liberal in the spending of their money. The number will be doubled this evening.

Railway Construction in British South Africa.—The fact that a passenger may now enter a compartment at Johannesburg station and alight at Walvis Bay without change is indicative of the transportation enterprise which has been taking place in the last few months along the southwest border of the Cape and in the territory lately held by the Germans.

In the course of one of the numerous speeches which General Botha has been making recently, he stated that the total number of miles of railway construction since Union was the end of July, 1915, was 1,449, while another 950 miles would be ready at the end of this year.

English Railway Stations Closed.—The London and Southern railway recently decided that, owing to the enlistment of railway men and the consequent shortage of staff, a number of its stations would be temporarily closed.

Catarrh is as much a blood disease as scrofula or rheumatism. It may be relieved, but it cannot be removed by simply local treatment. It breaks down the general health, weakens the lung tissues, and leads to consumption.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is so successful in the treatment of catarrh that it is known as the best remedy for this disease. It purifies the blood. Ask your druggist for it.

FACTS STATED AS TO A DESERVING CASE

Letter Relative to Aged Woman Suffering from Tubercular Trouble Received by Postmaster

In the Wednesday issue of the Gazette in the Woman's Council, an article appeared relative to an aged woman who was suffering from tubercular trouble, in which it was intimated that the poor commissioner was not doing his entire duty and calling upon the Associated Charities to aid her. After the publication of the article referred to, there was considerable comment on the subject and an investigation on the part of the council was made with the following result, which in justice to Asa Anderson, the poor commissioner referred to, is published.

The woman in question, with her daughter, came here from Battle Creek, Michigan some time after Christmas. The daughter is a widow and Anderson states that she is a Mother's Pension case from the state of Michigan. Aid has been given the aged woman but upon investigation and becoming convinced that the case was not one for which Battle Creek tax payers should pay support, Mr. Anderson wrote to Battle Creek relative to the case and received the following reply. The names of the women are left blank as it is the desire to advertise the misfortune of any person.

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 4, 1915.

Replying to yours in regard to (Mrs. _____ and Mrs. _____) will say. These people have given me a lot of trouble. She was continually saying that if she could get back to her old home where her relatives where she would be taken care of without expense to anyone. I told her that if she got there she would be calling on the authorities for assistance, she declared she never would. She tried to get me to furnish transportation and I refused. She tried to borrow the money of the Associated Charities and they refused. Where she got the money I never knew. Now if you will send the aged woman back here we will take care of her and good care any of the daughter can get along without assistance send her and we care for her. But under no circumstances will we pay for their further care here unless we are compelled to do so by law.

Their friends, neighbors and the authorities here are worn out with their experiences with this family. Their ideas are far beyond the means of people in their circumstances. I am always glad to help a widow struggling to care for her children, but when they become unreasonable in their demands we are obliged to call a halt. Send aged woman back here at our expense and we will care for her and daughter also, if necessary. Trusting this will be satisfactory. I remain,

Very truly yours,
H. A. Whitney,
Superintendent of the Poor.

Room 9, Buckley Block.

Mr. Anderson's coupon notified the aged woman that he would return her to Michigan as requested or cut off county aid here. He did this in the fact that if the woman remains in Rock county and is not established a county charge, having established a residence here, it would be difficult to compel the authorities to take any action in the case. The woman stated that in order to obtain county aid the recipient must have had a years residence without receiving any aid. And while this woman has obtained some few dollars she has been a technical point and hard to establish. As to the daughter when her residence is established she will not have the Michigan pension any longer to aid her.

Mr. Anderson feels that injustice was done him and while reluctant to make public the letter did so at the suggestion of several persons who have personally intervened and believe the sympathies of the public have perhaps been misled in the matter by the previous article published.

SURVIVORS OF WAR TO HOLD REUNION

Spanish-American War Men Who Enlisted in the First Regiment to Meet Nov. 30.

Janesville and Rock county survivors of Wisconsin's first regiment, organized and sent out upon call from the Spanish-American war service in the first regimental reunion in Milwaukee Nov. 30, in the armory corner of Twenty-seventh and Vliet street. It was stated that several hundred will be present.

The first regiment was composed of four Milwaukee companies, and the companies from each of the following cities: Madison, Monroeville, Racine, Whitewater, Appleton, Beloit and Stoughton.

The promptness with which the companies responded, reporting at the state fair park, where they drilled about a month, was a surprise to men who had had similar experience thirty-seven years before. Governor Edward Scofield, Adjutant General C. Boardman and Colonel Worthley E. Patton, assistant adjutant general, were in camp most of the time, lending invaluable service in preparing and equipping the companies.

Sickness Claimed Many.
The day before the command left for the south, the regiment was paraded and listened to addresses by Governor Scofield, Mayor Governor Peck and Mayor Rose. Their first camp was on the Chickamauga battlefield, and it went from there to Jacksonville, Florida. The regiment lost heavily from typhoid fever.

The coming reunion will take place upon the seventeenth anniversary of its return to Wisconsin and muster out. When Milwaukee gave the command a warm welcome and a battle to the signal corps as a volunteer second lieutenant, served in Cuba and went to the Philippines.

Promotions Are Rapid.
His efficiency carried him to the regular army in the same corps, and in 1903 he became a captain. Since then he became a "distinguished graduate of the Army School of the Line," and a year later was promoted to the rank of major. In 1913 he was made a member of the general staff. He is as promising a young officer as the army possesses and soon to become a major.

E. J. Bracken of Milwaukee, son of the late H. S. Bracken, went with the first as a lieutenant and later to the Philippines with a volunteer regiment, and then to the regular army. He reached his captaincy in 1911 and has had service with the Philippine Scouts with the rank of major. He is a graduate of one of the service schools.

Another private was Lawrence A. Curtis, son of Colonel Curtis, who, for and for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered with catarrh for seven years; catarrh of the head, nose and throat, and stomach. Peruna cured me. I followed your advice and I used three bottles of Peruna in three weeks, and now my trouble is all over. I will never be without Peruna in my house. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy. I am pleased to make public the good that Peruna has done me." In a later letter Mr. Rossi writes: "I will never be without Peruna in my house. a long time, commanded the University Cadet regiment. He is now a captain in the Twenty-second United States Infantry.

The Beloit company, as did the company from Stoughton, sent a man to the regular army as an officer, and many of the enlisted men have had service in the regular army.

LIMA
Lima, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Martha Elphick is here from Iowa visiting relatives.
Mr. and Mrs. Millard entertained friends from Monroe over night Friday.

Several from this place attended the German market at Milton last Wednesday afternoon and evening.

John Collins left this morning for Butte, Montana, being called there to identify a man who is thought to be Stillman Castle, and who claims to be Charles Graham. Mr. Collins goes in company with N. A. Kinney of Whitewater, who is subpoenaed on the same case.

The road men have finished their work here and have gone over on the Milton road.

Mrs. Belle Collins was a Janesville visitor Thursday.

Miss Ruby Mahoney was up from Milton and spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Willard Reese.

Rev. J. B. Gidney left on Tuesday for the West. He expects to spend the winter in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Collins will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Meryel and Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain of Milton Junction Sunday.

Mexico City, Oct. 23.—The corn harvest has been with the prospect that about 55,000,000 bushels were garnered. As the normal crop totals in the neighborhood of 130,000,000 bushels, which is insufficient for Mexico's 15,000,000 inhabitants, the misery and distress which are prevalent for months past will be greatly accentuated during the winter months.

American Red Cross representatives have tried vainly for the past fortnight to purchase corn and other cereals and have finally been compelled to place their orders in the United States with the hope that delivery will be made in time to relieve the grave situation which the Mexican poor will have to face during the cold winter. Corn is still selling at a prohibitive price for those who need it and the prospective crop shortage of 80 per cent will greatly increase even this price.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Fair tonight and Sunday; not much change in

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn.
And thought with a nervous dread
Of the piles of clothes to be washed, and more Than a dozen mouths to be fed.
There's the meals to get for the men in the old
And the children to fix away
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned;
And all to be done this day."
It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be;
There were puddings and pies to bake, beside
A loaf of cake for tea.
And the day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbed wearily as she said:
"If maidens but knew what good wives know
They would be in no haste to wed."
"Jennie, what do you think I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well.
And a flush crept over his bronzed brow
And his eyes half-bashfully fell.
"It was this," said he, and coming near.
He smiled, and stooping down, Kissed her cheek, "Twice this; that you were the best
And dearest wife in town!"
The farmer went back to the field and the wife
In a smiling, absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs.
She'd not sung for many a day;
And the pain in her head was gone,
and the clothes
Were white as the foam of the sea;
Her bread was light and her butter was sweet,
And as golden as it could be.
"Just think!" the children all cried in a breath,
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!
He wouldn't, I know, if he'd only had
As happy a home as we."
The night came down, and the good wife smiled.
To herself she softly said:
"Tis so sweet to labor for those we love—
It's not strange that maidens will wed!"—Anon.
The sentiment expressed in this little poem is so true to life that it is worth emphasizing, for it applies to every home where women toil and sacrifice.
The life of the wife and mother is more or less circumscribed, and the four walls which environ her, represent, in many cases, the world in which she lives. It shows her a happy world, and often is. Much depends on the appreciation bestowed. Just a kiss and an old-time lover's greeting lightened the burdens and cheered the heart of the wife whose outlook in the morning was so discouraging.
If John had gone about his work, with no thought of the faithful partner, who was doing her share to make the partnership a success, there would have been no greater blessing to the clouds which made the day so dreary, but the inspiration which came to him, saved the day, and made a woman happy.
There are too many "Johns" who are never troubled with this kind of an inspiration, and too many "Marys" whose life becomes a drudgery, because of this sort of neglect. The trouble with too many men is, that they exhausted their vocabulary of love, back in the days of courtship, when they were winning the prize, and the sentiment, which meant so much to the girl, is neglected.
The heart of a woman never changes, so far as sentiment is concerned, and the words of love and endearment, which brought to her cheeks the blush of happiness, back in the early days, when the home was founded, are no less significant as the little attentions later in life, when the wear and tear of the journey has sapped vitality, and transformed a care-free life to a life of toil and sacrifice.
It is just as natural for a good woman to love her home and her husband and children as it is for her to breathe, and she is constantly expressing this love by words and deeds.
The test of love is sacrifice, and no sacrifice is too great for the home over which she presides. This is sentiment refined in the crucial test of experience, and the strain of the testing is not always appreciated.
The life of the average man, who supports a home, is a busy life. It is often so full of worry and anxiety that it absorbs the finer sensibilities, and the home suffers as a result. He may be temperate, and a good provider, but these virtues, while commendable, do not meet all the requirements of a happy home.
The wife who waits for him at supper time, is the same girl who stood by his side at the altar. He promised them to care for her and when he does this he is simply performing a sacred duty, but she has a right to expect more than care.
The little courtesies and attentions which won her admiration, and finally captured her heart, should stand the test of time, and when they do, the dear, however humble, is usually a happy home. Just a kindly word or a smile of appreciation often dispels the clouds and transforms the dark day to a day of sunshine. It doesn't require much effort to make the wife and mother happy, and cause the little world in which she lives to be a paradise.

Much has been said and written,
during these days of piping reform, about the "working girl," and a great deal of maiden sentiment has been aroused, in her behalf. All sorts of laws have been passed, for her benefit, and efforts have been made to safeguard her character and reputation through increased wage scales and a more liberal income.
Prominent among the wealthy workers, along this line, is Miss Anne Morgan of New York City. Miss Morgan is a sensible woman and she soon discovered that much of the work was misdirected, and a good deal of sympathy wasted. This is what she says:

"There is one expression that I should like to have abolished, and that is 'Working Girl.' I should like to have that cut out of the English language. What does it mean? Is it a matter of age, of salary, or of occupation? When does one begin to be a 'working girl' and when does one cease to be a 'working girl'?"

Collier's Magazine, is commenting,
says:
"True talk! That phrase has certainly been overworked. The well-intentioned, short-sighted reformer weeps maudlin tears over the 'working girl.' The sociologist fastens his second-hand statistics on her. The sex author finds her a handy little person, and adds a loose young millionaire, the love chase, stirs, and presto! there's a best seller. The cynic—on the rare occasions when he can be persuaded to take her seriously—maintains that her potentialities for evil are unlimited. The blind optimist sees her as the patient incarnation of all human virtues. Meanwhile the working girl herself calmly surveys all this to-do, quietly laughs, and goes on saving wood. She knows she isn't always supersubtilized or misjudged. O. Henry understood her."

"When you come to the kind of girl she was, you'll find a belt of 'em reaching from the Brooklyn Bridge west as far as the court house in Council Bluffs, Iowa. They earn their own living in stores, restaurants, factories, and offices. * * They're chummy and honest and free and tender and sassy, and they look life straight in the eye."

"After all, the much-misunderstood
'working girl' is nothing but the Girl Who Works. It's a simple fact, and it will grasp this simple fact, and it will also realize that the Girl who Works is a good deal happier than the Girl who Plays. And not a bit harder to understand."

The girl who works, later becomes the wife and mother, and so far as work is concerned soon discovers that it is not a question of hours or wages, for it is an old saying that while
"Woman may work from sun to sun,
'Woman' will never be done."

The difference between the working girl and the working woman, is largely a difference of environment, and it sometimes happens that the wife and mother, wearied with care and toil, regrets that she ever exchanged the care-free life for a life of bondage, for that is what the home sometimes means to the silent partner, whose name does not appear on the payroll, and who is humiliated by every dollar due to her.

It was said, a long time ago that two men never know each other until they engage in business together.
They may have been the best of friends and boon companions, but the testing period came when the partnership was formed, and many little traits of character came to the surface as a disagreeable surprise.

If this is true of men in business, and it is, it is doubly true of the life partnership entered into by the man and woman who join hands and fortunes for better or for worse, until death do them part.
If two men, who have associated together as friends, for years, do not know each other, it is not surprising that wedded life is a lottery, and that the test of time is not always equal to the strain.

While a business partnership may be terminated at any time, a life partnership is not so easy to dissolve and dissolution, usually comes as the last resort.
There will be more happy homes and contented wives and mothers when the male contingent of every home partnership realizes that married life is a give and take proposition, with emphasis on the "give."
It isn't the gallantry in society, or the courtesy in the shop, that counts, but the little things of every day life, which mean so much to the woman in the home, mindful of the fact that the test of love is sacrifice.

Primping.
It seems as though most all the lumps in me arise when my wife primps.
I sit around and fume and fret
And holler: "Gosh, ain't you done
She sticks a hairpin in her head."
Then tries another one instead.
She lies her hair up, takes it down,
And wiggles into her new gown.
Right there's where she begins to get

And pose to get her form exact.
She waits a while before the glass
Until the time has come, alas,
To raise the curtain at the show—
And she not ready, quite to go
She pokes at this and peeks at that
And finally gets to her hair Right there is where the world stands still!
There's not a thing to do until
She gets that thing upon her straight
And it wait and wait and wait.
Like the suffragists all right,
But I don't think they're ready quite
To vote the same as do the men.
Because, you see, I think that when
The time would come for them to go They'd all be primping, don't you know.
Election day would be gone ere They'd fixed up half of their back hair.

Off in the Stilly Night,
On in the stilly night,
Ere slumber's chains have bound me,
When spooklike shadows play
On walls of the chamber 'round me;
When I'm nervous, worn and weary,
Then there comes a familiar squeaking,
A sound that is weird and dreary.
A plaintive and piercing shrieking.
It continues without an end
And causes each nerve to jump.
I have a desire to land
On some energetic chump.
I hanker in vain to have 'em
Some heavy and crushing missile
And put out of business quick
That confounded popcorn whistle.

The more they have the easier it is to get it. The purse with a tight string is usually a small one.

If you are a woman you may as well make up your mind that you will, eventually, be either too fat or too thin.

The theatre will be pretty nearly ideal when they may it as comfortable as a church.

Remember the old problem concerning the ultimate destination of the pins? A man gets the answer every time he buys a shirt.

The second wife usually has the better time while she lives, but the expensive tombstone is erected over the first wife's grave.

In the contest to decide as to the most useless thing in a pocket, the hip pocket has a good many partisans.

The Daily Novelette

The Battle.
—Don't talk about a man behind his back. That's the place to kick him.

Prof. Simp.
The field hospital was quiet except for the honking in the shoes of the reporter, who stood in the middle of the bedside of a fearfully battered man, not to say torn, soldier.
"How did you come to happen to get so terribly wounded?"
The soldier opened his pale amethyst eyes.
"It was this way," he began huskily, while the reporter hastily opened his note book. "One half of me is German. The other half is French. I lay in the trench. Suddenly the battle began. My French leg kicked my German leg, my German leg kicked off its boot and scratched my French leg from thigh to there. My German hand scratched out my French eye and my French hand clawed off the German side of my nose. You see what is left of me."
And he closed his pale amethyst eyes and the reporter tole away, muttering, "Clean dippy! Too bad. Too bad."
"Now maybe they'll let me alone for a while," chuckled the wounded man with a comfortable stretch.

ANNIVERSARY OF BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR TODAY.

London, Oct. 21.—Indomitable Nelson lies fast in eternal sleep, and all but the fraction of a century has rolled away since when was fought the Battle of Trafalgar. But the thundering guns, the screaming snells, the lamentations of the hurrying, cannot shut out from Britain's ears the eloquent silence from that day of ninety-nine years ago; and in the British heart the feeling is serene and sure that this day's sun will fall upon some victory, some masterstroke, that will make a mad rejoicing midst the watching shades of Trafalgar's lost legions.

CHINA CAN PRODUCE ANTIMONY NOW SINCE GERMANY IS CRIPPLED.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Hankow, China, Oct. 22.—As a result of the interruption of German industries, China has unexpectedly become the chief producer of antimony and Hankow is China's chief antimony center.
Before the war there was one antimony plant in Hankow and it was not operated. Now it is working and two others have been established.
More than half of the 40,000 tons of antimony was produced in China, chiefly in Hankow. The price of the metal is uncertain at all times and the opening of the war.
Antimony is chiefly used in peace times by the printing trade. A slight amount of the metal is necessary in making type. It is also required in treating lead for use in ammunition, but the proportion demanded is very slight. Ore from which antimony may be obtained is available in several parts of China, but in ordinary times the amount of the metal necessary to supply the world is not sufficient to justify big operations.

BILL PERKINS QUITS PROGRES- SIVES.

"Is Philipp going to run again?"
The office chaser cried.
"You bet your bottom dollar."
Said Bill Perkins by his side.
"We want Emanuel badly
To finish up the job,
And maybe we will call on him,
To measure strength with Bob."
There's suthin' 'bout the governor
That just appeals to me,
He tries to do the best he can,
As far as I can see.
It may be that he don't succeed
In all he tries to do,
But that's human fault, I guess,
That troubles me and you.

I know he's not in favor
With the office-chasing clan;
That the goggle-eyed reformers,
Are again him to a man.
But the farmers, they all like him
'Cause he always stands by them;
If he runs, I know the finish,
And will bet my pile on him.

I, myself, was once the fiercest
Of the whole progressive crowd.
I have cheered all the reformers, Cheered them long, and cheered them loud.
Why, I've listened to LaFollette
For four years at the time,
Saw him fan and paw the ether,
Just as if he'd lost his mind.

You will laugh when this I tell you,
But it's true as you were born,
When I was a wild progressive,
I thought Stalwarts were long horns.
Why, I thought, poor, simple gossling,
That if it were not for me,
I, and thousands more, just like me,
Would be begging on the street.

Fourteen years I thought and pondered
Over dangers that seemed real,
Never for a moment dreaming,
That I lacked a balance wheel.
Off at night, while others slumbered,
Green-eyed stalwarts swarmed my room.
Hissed their poison on my pillow,
Called on me to meet my doom.

Oh, the tortures that I suffered,
Crossing bridges made of sand,
While my good progressive brethren
Heaped the taxes on my land.
Heaped them high, and wide, and fancy.

While my shouts rang through the skies,
Calling on the patriotic,
To help out progressive guys.

I was "Bill" to all the faithful,
Just plain "Bill" among the boys,
And in mobilizing season,
I was there to swell the noise.
Oh, how often, during haying,
You'd yell and call me to the phone.
To ask how you were moving,
And to learn if I were home.

It seems queer, that I, a farmer,
Trained to plow and wield the ax,
Knew no better than to holler
For the men who raised my tax.
When a man is soaked in nonsense,
And his soul is all aflame
With the fire of hate and malice,
Surely he is not to blame.

If at times he acts real foolish,
Swallows all the "guff" he hears,
Chases phantoms like a hunter
Follows up the trail of deer.
When I heard as how the railroads
Were absorbing all I earned,
I grew madder than a hatter
At the stalwarts whom I spurned.

Ten long years they kept me humping
Like a stevedore on the deck
Of a giant ocean liner
That had just passed through a wreck.
Off they told me how they loved me;
That without me, they'd be lost;
Slapped my back and stroked my whiskers,
Then gave me the double cross.

For ten years I lived in clover,
Everybody called me "Bill."
Sent me nomination papers
Which they wanted me to fill.
I attended all their rallies,
But, of course, at my expense;
Ran my legs off for the leaders,
Just as if I'd lost my sense.

It takes times to disillusion Men who've gulped progressive stuff
Till their sides are fairly bursting Before they know they've had enough.
This I did, without a murmur,
Thinking I was doing right.
For to me a stalwart winning
Was a grewsome, sickening sight.

Finally, I had a vision.
And, to my great surprise,
Scales as big as silver dollars,
Fell in torrents from my eyes.
Then I saw as plain as noonday,
How for more than half a century,
Demagogues had reaped a harvest,
Working on the people's fears.

Back there came in retrospection,
Things I did I won't do now,

NO ALUM in Dr. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

Sixty Years the Standard

Made from Cream of Tartar

One was at the "Gym" convention
Where we had our last pow wow.
I was stationed at the entrance,
Told to guard the great big door
And if Stalwarts tried to enter,
Lay them sprawling on the floor.

On each hip a Smith & Wesson,
Loaded to the very brim;
That's the way progressive opened
The convention at the "Gym."
I was there among the sluggers,
Who were stationed 'round the room,
Where we could, on signal given,
Send the stalwarts to their doom.

Do you wonder why Bill Perkins
Views his past with keen remorse?
Why no longer he is willing To fight the men in sinecures?
If, like Bill, you lived by labor,
And, like him, you never shirked,
Maybe you'd be some suspicious,
Of a crowd that "did you dirt."

Maybe when you paid your taxes,
Saw them soaring to the skies,
That perchance you'd grow suspicious
Of the office-holding guys.

Then if someone whom you trusted
Showed you how you'd been a fool,
You'd make up your mind right quickly
To adopt Bill Perkins' rule.

Old Bill Perkins is for Phillips,
All progressives, please take note,
There will be some great reforming
When we get your leader's goat.
Now call Bill a "crabapple toby."
Dubb him with the worst of names;
Just remember Bill's more honest
Than he was before the change.

Henceforth he'll be found a-voting
With the men who run the farm.
Surely they are not all Tories.
Though they vote for less reform.
He will honor smokestack builders.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED SOLDIERS IN LONDON IS A GLOOMY SIGHT.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Oct. 23.—The arrival of the first wounded from the battle of Loos, following directly upon the first exciting news of the British advance in the West, was a dramatic incident of a London night. In a vast and gloomy railway station, which had as few lights going as were needed to show the way without betraying the place to a possible Zeppelin, a silent crowd had gathered. Suburban and overland trains were teaming in and pulling out, porters rushing about with trunks and bags on hand trucks, civilian passengers asking about platforms or arguing with the women inspectors, who are not yet entirely accustomed with their duties.

The crowd which waited silently and patiently in the midst of this bustle was composed of relatives of men at the front. Shortly before midnight, a train, loaded with the wounded, drew up at a side platform. The gates swung open and the wounded, in torn and powder stained khaki, heads bandaged, arms in slings or on crutches appeared, followed by procession of stretchers. After a rough crossing, the wounded so cheerful, had no cheers left in them, and the crowd felt no desire to cheer.
These able-bodied men, who put in motor-cars and buses, and the men prostrate on stretchers were lifted into ambulances. The watchers crowded up as close as the police would allow, looking for familiar faces. But it was against orders for the wounded to talk. Soon they were whisked away into the darkened streets of London, and the crowd dispersed.

The reservations for space are many, some plants having content with only a portion of an exhibit they first desired. The floor plans and exhibit arrangements as drawn by City Engineer Kerch are unique and novel. The building will be decorated for the occasion.

The Booster Sale. In addition to the "Made in Janesville" show, the merchants of the city are arranging for the big annual sale, Amos Rehberg is at the head of the committee and is finding much co-operation to make this feature a success. The committee will make further announcements regarding the fare refunding exhibit through the columns of the Gazette at a later date.

Club Banquet Tuesday. Already a hundred reservations have been made for the banquet of the Commercial Club members which is scheduled for Tuesday evening, October 26, at 7 o'clock, at the Hotel Elgin. Today the officers of the club are arranging the program for the evening. The opening address will be made by President J. A. Craig. R. Johnson of Milwaukee, expert business street and other illumination, will elucidate the features of ornamental lights. Secretary W. J. McDowell is scheduled next for several remarks, to be followed by the address of City Attorney William H. Dougherty. Mayor Reed of Beloit, famed throughout the United States as a grower of pedigreed "Blue" Rural, will address the meeting on "The Rural What City Cooperation Should Be."

It is requested to those who have not mailed their return cards as to the absence or presence at the fair, to do so at once to permit full accommodations being made.

TESTIMONY OF HOWE IMPLICATES JACKSON

Jackson Bound Over for Trial on November Eighth.—Committed to County Jail.

George Jackson, alleged to be connected with the hold-up as an accessory at the Northwestern station in Beloit, was bound over for trial by Judge John Clark in the Beloit municipal court, after his preliminary examination in the Line City court yesterday afternoon. He was committed to the county jail until the trial set for November eighth some time this noon.

Paul Howe, Waupun convict and former companion of Jackson, was brought to Janesville last night and taken back to the state prison. Howe was the main witness of District Attorney S. G. Dunwiddie and at the examination gave his incriminating testimony against Jackson in a most startling, calm, deliberate and dispassionate manner. He did not claim in his testimony that Jackson was actually connected with the hold-up of the station, but he did say, however, that Jackson and he had the details of the robbery rehearsed in Jackson's home and that after he had succeeded in robbing the station, Jackson, Howe and the spoils of Jackson, Dunwiddie brought out the fact from Howe that it was a desire for a western trip that prompted the men to plan the crime. It was first suggested that the American Express office be held up, but this was abandoned. After rehearsing their proposed robbery, Howe and Jackson went to the station and separated. Jackson, Howe testified, waited outside and watched for danger. After Howe had rifled the station funds, holding off the agent of the point of a gun, he met Jackson according to the prearranged plans and both came to Janesville on the interurban car. Howe from this city went to Chicago and a few days later returned to Beloit. Howe's cross examination failed to shake him from his account of the crime. Mayor Adams of Beloit, is Jackson's attorney.

OPEN NIGHT AT "Y" FOR WORKING BOYS

Will Hold Reception for All Working Boys of the City at Y. M. C. A. on Tuesday Evening.

The Young Men's Christian association building will be thrown open Tuesday evening, October 26, to all boys of the city between the ages of sixteen and eighteen years, who are employed during the day. It is planned by H. J. Center and the older boys' cabinet, to hold this reception between the hours of seven-thirty and eleven o'clock. These gifts will be made to the building and see for themselves the work that is being carried on.

A general program has been arranged, including exhibitions in the gymnasium and swimming pool. The boys will be given the free use of all the games in the boys' division and probably be allowed to go in the tank for a plunge. There will be a committee of older fellows chosen from this division to show the guests around the building and explain the workings of each department.

There are no written invitations being sent out, but it is hoped that every boy in the city who works all through the day will take this chance and come up to the "Y" on that night and enjoy a pleasant evening.

These gifts were made to the decorations of the rooms and are appreciated very much by the officers of the association.

Beloit, Oct. 23.—Mrs. Ella F. Holloway of Janesville escaped a serious injury here this morning when the light and new touring car which she was driving crashed into the curbing at State and East streets and Grand avenue, following her attempt to give room to another automobile. Mrs. Holloway was removed from the driver's seat, less bruised, but otherwise escaped serious injury. A rear wheel of her machine was smashed in the contact with the curbing.

The lake city players secured their points on forward passing, showing themselves adept at this feature.

HUGE PLATE WINDOW BROKEN BY ACCIDENT

Hundred and Fifty Dollar Plate Window at Golden Eagle Cracked While Being Put in Frame.

One slip of a small block and crash went a huge plate glass window that was being placed in the display window of the Golden Eagle store on West Main street, yesterday afternoon and one end was broken, destroying the plate for the window. The glass measured fifteen feet long and seven feet high, and was valued at over one hundred dollars.

All during the afternoon extreme care was employed in taking the huge plate from the truck. It was carefully encased in a gigantic straw filled box and the truck falling loose, the plate while the other window was being taken out. The original window had a crack at one end caused by a workman screwing the plate into the frame, leaving the crack loose as compared to the end. Caution and more caution was exercised in moving the glass to a position where it could be lifted to the frame. Rough hands were gentle in putting the glass under the glass and raising it a fraction of an inch at a time to its proper position. At the end towards the river the edge of the glass was placed on a small block and the final preparations were made to slip it into the loaded groove. Something happened and the end of the plate slipped and the huge plate fell on the concrete pavement with most disastrous results. A greater portion of the glass is still valuable as it can be cut up into two smaller pieces. The loss is covered by insurance. New lead is to be placed in the frame grooves and by this means it is hoped to prevent the cracking of the plate glass.

T. E. BENNISON DIES; IS TAKEN SUDDENLY

Well Known Janesville Man Succumbs This Morning at Chicago Hospital Where He Underwent Operation.

Word was received by J. E. Lane shortly after eleven o'clock this morning, of the death of his business partner, T. E. Bennison, who succumbed this morning at the Augustina hospital in Chicago, where he underwent Wednesday for an operation. The death comes as a distinct shock to relatives and friends, as it was expected that Mr. Bennison was recovering nicely from the effects of the operation, a postal card written in his own hand having been received by relatives in this city on Thursday.

Mrs. Bennison and daughter, Mrs. Hagar of St. Paul, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bennison, and Mrs. J. E. Lane left for Chicago this morning with the intention of spending Sunday in the city.

Mr. Bennison was a prominent business man in the city of Chicago and was at his father's bedside for a year or so Mr. Bennison had been suffering with catarrh, which finally became troublesome and he decided to submit to an operation which it was not thought in any way serious. He entered the hospital on Wednesday and was operated upon the same day. He seemed to be in good condition after the operation, but it is evident that a relapse set in, or that the operation was more serious than his family at first supposed.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(Published Saturdays.)

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—Please answer the following questions as soon as possible. I have a motor car that has given me considerable trouble the last two months. The motor has been pounding very loud, but after I scraped the carbon off from the cylinders it did not pound so much, but still I can hear it when the car runs fast without any hard pulling. Where can I get them made? How shall I put on new piston rings? Are the cutting cars made any more and if so where is the company and address of a company where I can get repairs for this car? The wrist pins are loose on my car. Most any machine shop can make new wrist pins for you. In order to install new piston rings it will be necessary to remove the cylinders. The rings should be fitted accurately to the pistons and cylinders. Any good mechanic can do this work.

As for the carburetor adjustment you do not state what model carburetor you are using. The reason definite information cannot be given is that we do not have the necessary information. You might also ask for an adjustment which will explain everything in detail.

You can obtain parts for your car from the Cutting Auto Company, Jackson, Mich., and also from the Motor Car Company, Waterloo, Iowa.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a 1909 car, which has been run about 55,000 miles. This spring the first time I had the engine overhauled, I found on bearing in the rear of the crank shaft, also installed in rear of ring in each cylinder; otherwise cylinders in good condition. Wrist pins found in good condition, more than 1000.

One of the men for the first couple of hundred miles and then I had the engine overhauled. This spring the first time I had the engine overhauled, I found on bearing in the rear of the crank shaft, also installed in rear of ring in each cylinder; otherwise cylinders in good condition. Wrist pins found in good condition, more than 1000.

The knock may be caused by too much advanced spark. When a motor is running, a little spark cannot be carried so far advanced. This probably is the cause of your trouble. As the motor begins to slow down in pulling, the spark should be brought back to meet this condition. If it is not done, the force of the explosion is exerted on the piston before it passes the center and tends to pull the piston, causing a knock. This not only reduces the power but also injures all the bearings of the motor.

Motoring Department, The Gazette.—I have a good touring car, and when I start at first speed it goes good and all second, but when I put it into third gear and operate it for a few blocks she starts to knock. Can you tell me where the trouble lies? I also have trouble with my carburetor as the engine does not receive proper feed of gas, and seems to choke, and when it chokes my engine will completely stop. Can you also tell me what seems to be the cause of this?

HELPFUL HINTS.

In order to reduce the wear on the coil vibrator points with battery ignition, reverse the direction of flow of current occasionally.

A simple method of locating a loose wrist pin is by short circuiting each spark plug in turn, noting the sound of the engine each time. When knocking sound lessens you have located the cylinder with loose wrist pin.

There is a right way and a wrong way to attach side chains. In the first place the chain should be installed with the hooks on the outside and away from the tire. If this is not done the hooks will chafe the coating. In the second place, the chain should not be hooked up too tightly. If they are allowed to work freely the chains will work more easily and cause a more uniform wear. When this is done the thread is less apt to be loosened.

When the electric self-starting device fails to start the engine after reason-able delay, the trouble should be located without delay. One cannot expect too much from a small battery. The self-starting device is supposed to crank the engine indefinitely.

If the lights go out suddenly or the horn refuses to blow, check the fuse box. It is usually located in an accessible place and the blowing of a new fuse will quite often prove the answer.

SIDE LIGHTS on THE CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT

A few days ago I received a letter from an old friend, telling me of the misfortune of Frank A. Robbins, whose show went to the wall some four weeks ago. While he gave me many particulars of Frank A. Robbins' misfortune in the last few years in his early career, I knew as much, or possibly more, than any other one about Frank A. Robbins, and the show which he started from a small beginning.

It was along in the '70s that Frank A. Robbins, who was then not much more than a tramp, came to Philadelphia looking for work with the Adam Forepaugh Show. He was given a position as candy butcher with the show, which meant that he was to peddle popcorn and lemonade for the candy stands.

The young man put in a few years with the Adam Forepaugh show, saved his money and finally got a few horses and wagons together and with the aid of his old employer, Adam Forepaugh, he started a small wagon show on the road, which for some years was an eastern show, taking in only the small towns through Pennsylvania and New York.

Helped young Robbins not only with stock and animals for his show, but at different times gave him money to paint up the small wagon show so that it could go out in the winter. Looking like a new show. From a small beginning, Frank A. Robbins finally grew until he bought a few horses and then the show was launched out as a railroad show, and gradually grew until it took two sections to carry it over the road and the business was quite prominent.

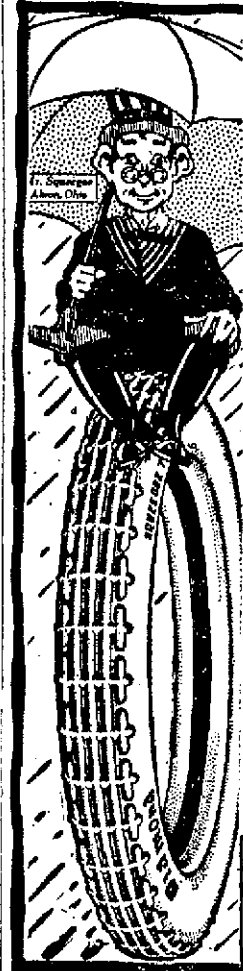

But this last season was certainly the worst that show had ever seen, and the show struck many towns where they were unable to unload and the show moved on to be paid for the day and then the show was back account in the spring was not a heavy one, and some four weeks ago the show which had taken more than thirty-five years of the best of Frank A. Robbins' life to build up, was all gone.

It was every spring and fall during my time with Adam Forepaugh, that I would meet Frank A. Robbins in Philadelphia, for it was near there that he wintered his show for many years. But Frank was the kind that would make the best of any misfortune that befell him, and it was said that he would always bob up serenely with a smile on his face and say that it was always the darkest before the dawn, and that his luck would get another start in the business or not, but his friends all hope that he may.

In looking back for years of the men that became rich and famous in the business, I can only recall one that was well to do when he started in the business, and that man was Adam Forepaugh. All the rest built their shows from a small beginning, and little by little they were struggling over the road with a few horses and wagons, that they were building the foundation for a name that would go far toward making history for years after they were dead and gone, Adam Forepaugh.

LORD BRYCE BLAMES THE TELEGRAPH FOR THE EUROPEAN WAR

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE) London, Oct. 23.—A new "cause" of the European war, and one of the most original yet given, has been propounded by Lord Bryce, former British ambassador at Washington, who attributes the conflict to the invention of the telegraph. In an address before the British Academy, Lord Bryce thus put the blame on telegraphy.

"In the twelve fatal days between July 23 and August 4, last year, there was no time for reflection. Telegrams between seven capitals flew hither and thither like swift arrows crossing one another; and it would have needed a mind of more than human amplitude and energy to grasp and correlate all the issues involved and to foresee the results that would follow the various lines of action possible in a game so complicated.

"Even the intellect of a Caesar or a Bonaparte would have been unequal to the task.

"Here the telegraph has worked for evil. Had the communications passed by water dispatches as they would have done eighty years ago, it is probable that war might have been avoided."

WOMAN'S PAGE

Married Life on $80 a Month

By Mrs. Van Leonard

"You look like the day after," said Julia Osgood, smiling across John Sumner's table.

"Well, my looks do not belie me," he answered moodily.

"I never knew a man with such an expressive face," continued Julia.

"That is a regular barometer, registering the mental atmosphere."

"That is unfortunate when there is a falling barometer, local storms and general atmospheric disturbance."

"I am afraid an inflection will be issued and I will be turned out if I'm such poor company."

"Nothing new," she asked sympathetically.

"No, just a little more of the same."

"I don't think anything would be relieved even a change for the worse," his tone was bitter.

"Don't say that. It is tempting Providence," exclaimed Julia in real distress.

"Don't worry; nothing worse can come to a man than to be ground between the upper and nether millstones of sharp financial distress."

"To put forth every effort and still feel the wolf snapping at his heels day after day makes me panicky. I know I cannot keep this thing up much longer, and I wonder what is going to break."

"Going to break; you mean your health?" asked the girl.

"My health or my honesty, or both," he replied.

"Don't talk like that. You do not mean half that, but it makes me shudder." The girl put her hands in her lap and stared at him.

"I am dreadfully upset this morning, that is a fact." He passed his shoulders a shudder when a man cannot control his nerves when he makes his family miserable because of the nervous tension he is under trying to supply their wants, it's time to throw up the sponge.

"Take a brace, man! Take a brace! You are a regular coward to say that. It's probably your liver that is giving you trouble. You need exercise. Anything but a man that has slumped into himself." John made no answer, but worked away in silence.

"It is the debt," he said briefly. "I could ever start clear, but I have no hope. Every mail I get threatening letters from my creditors back in Alpine. I am afraid they will proceed against me, and that would mean the loss of my position."

"How did you get so deep in the hole?" the girl was so interested that she did not realize that she was asking leading questions.

"Oh, sickness for one thing, but mostly extravagance, stupid ignorance of how to spend my money. It could be so blind to the facts of life as we were. When once a couple of fools dig such a pit for themselves, it does better now, she keeps inside her housekeeping allowance, but clearing off debts on our small savings is slow work."

"I do not know why I am unloading all my woes on you. To say the least, it is very bad taste, but I have no one to talk things over with, and you seem so friendly, so sensible; it makes me feel better to have it out."

"I wish I could be of some real help to you," said Julia earnestly.

SUFFRAGETTE PARADE IN NEW YORK TODAY

Twenty-five Thousand Women and Three Thousand Men March in Gigantic Parade.

(Special to The Gazette)

New York, Oct. 23.—What probably is the biggest suffrage parade on record was scheduled to start up Fifth avenue this evening. Twenty-five thousand women and 3,000 men, carrying 28,000 fluttering banners, were forming in marching orders to inspire enough favorable New York votes to give suffrage a landslide at the November 2 election.

Among the 3,000 men marchers were such well-known personalities as: Bill Irwin, author; George Middleton, playwright; William M. Mackay, artist; Allen McCurdy, clergyman; Samuel Merwin, author; William Rose Benet, editor; Wytter Binner, poet; Sinclair Lewis and Charles Norris, authors.

These were supplemented by lawyers, doctors, actors, business men, and just citizens.

Gigantic banners declaring "Wilson Is For Suffrage," "Suffrage Means Better Babies," "Suffrage Means Pure Milk," "Seven Million Women Vote Elsewhere in The World Why Not in New York?" and costing about $2,000 made the parade a veritable river of gay colors. In the midst of the bright banners, however, will be this solemn cry in a deep, black border: "New York Women Have No Vote At All!"

Mrs. Leonard Thomas, Newport social leader, will carry the International Woman Suffrage banner. She will be the first woman in the entire line, walking in advance of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt.

The parade will include a "proxy procession" of the twenty-six national representatives in the alliance, but no national colors will be carried except the American and Uncle Sam will lead. The women are to wear pure white.

The main divisions of the line, which starts from Washington Square at 3 p. m. and marches up Fifth avenue to Fifty-ninth street, will be the International section, the National Woman Suffrage association, the Empire State campaign committee, headed by Mrs. Raymond Brown, the state president, the Woman's Peace party, divided into boroughs and subdivided into assembly districts, and occupational groups. The largest of these will be the group of employees recruited by Commissioner of Correction Katherine B. Davis.

That's all for today. The parade will be a most becoming, because it shows off my hair," agreed the girl at the dressing table. "But this valour looks more businesslike. He is that sort of a man."

"Oh, I see!" mused Irene. "Well, you do look efficient in a business way. And it is that kind of an employer perhaps it is wise. Still, in dealing with men even a job seeker, it is always policy too look as pretty as you can."

"Um, I agree with you," worried Beatrice holding off her tailored suit and looking at it unenthusiastically. "And this morning I don't know which method to employ. You see, the younger man is the one who would like his associate to look capable, well-groomed, sensible. But the older who, after all, is the money-holder, is just the kind that would be more impressed with a curl peeking out of a babylike poke bonnet. If I was going to interview him without the other I'd probably add a dash of rouge."

"You are perfectly disgusting!" broke in the third member of the party, speaking more violently because her shoe-string broke at that moment. "For radicals and feminists you condescend to more dirty, feminine wiles and tricks than I thought you were capable of."

"It isn't a feminine wile. It is business sense. Didn't Bob wait until he got his new suit before interviewing play billiards just because the general manager of their firm is crazy about the admiration of these men?"

"Not an atom. I want their approval because it means dollars and pennies, and when I am impressing them with my genius I want to turn their pet prejudices to helpful—Glory, it is just a fair trick, Stella, will you see if my white skirt shows?"

Beatrice had taken a brisk departure long before Doris had found a new shoe lace. Stella leaned from her cot to watch their friend hurrying across the park.

"She's sure to get a good salary out of them," she remarked to her companion. "She looks so well and interested this morning. Now if it had been last week, when she heard of Jim's being ordered to Cuba for another six months' rest."

"She does look like the dickens when she gets mixed up in this love stuff," agreed Doris, unenthusiastically. "But this opening is a glorious opportunity, and she is so interested. It made her look ten years younger."

Beatrice, animated by the interest they were discussing, swung happily toward the office. At the first grass plot she hesitated, then halted. A man with two little children was playing with them in a splash of brilliant sunshine. The sturdy baby girl was hammering her father's base-running by swarming up his trouser leg. The boy, brown and joyous and chunky, laughed loudly as he succeeded in putting his daddy "out." The love-starved little businesswoman watched the smiling father snatch up his baby and kiss her on the soft dimpled sweet spot that is at the back of every little neck. And then she turned away, with a fumbling, blinded step and sagging shoulders. The efficiency had been wiped from her visage like a slate-drawing erased with a sponge. She received a job from the men she interviewed half an hour later but not at the comfortable salary figure she had hoped for.

"She's capable, all right, and may even have business genius," explained the younger man to his superior officer, "but we don't want her. She is going to pan out well. When I saw Monday she looked as if she would carry everything before her and simply knock clients of their feet. This morning—well, I still think a lot of her work, but we want to go slow."

"But we don't want her. She is going to pan out well. When I saw Monday she looked as if she would carry everything before her and simply knock clients of their feet. This morning—well, I still think a lot of her work, but we want to go slow."

Types Businesslike

By Sara Moore.

"Why don't you put on your hat with the transparent brim?" asked Stella, sleepily. She painted all day in the studio, after the other girls had started for down town, and they never encouraged her to too early rising, but because when more than two moved about the bath and dressing-room, studio traffic became congested.

It was her custom to do this, from the side-line—that is, the little cot bed tucked away in the farthest corner.

"Why—I know it is most becoming, because it shows off my hair," agreed the girl at the dressing table. "But this valour looks more businesslike. He is that sort of a man."

"Oh, I see!" mused Irene. "Well, you do look efficient in a business way. And it is that kind of an employer perhaps it is wise. Still, in dealing with men even a job seeker, it is always policy too look as pretty as you can."

"Um, I agree with you," worried Beatrice holding off her tailored suit and looking at it unenthusiastically. "And this morning I don't know which method to employ. You see, the younger man is the one who would like his associate to look capable, well-groomed, sensible. But the older who, after all, is the money-holder, is just the kind that would be more impressed with a curl peeking out of a babylike poke bonnet. If I was going to interview him without the other I'd probably add a dash of rouge."

"You are perfectly disgusting!" broke in the third member of the party, speaking more violently because her shoe-string broke at that moment. "For radicals and feminists you condescend to more dirty, feminine wiles and tricks than I thought you were capable of."

"It isn't a feminine wile. It is business sense. Didn't Bob wait until he got his new suit before interviewing play billiards just because the general manager of their firm is crazy about the admiration of these men?"

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Even Critics Are Not Infallible.

"You don't know that Anse Havey didn't incite this murder. You only choose to think so. Isn't that a fact?" stormed the prosecutor.

"I know that Anse Havey is incapable of it," was the tranquil retort. "How do you know that?"

"I know him."
"Who procured your presence in this courtroom as a defense witness?" Each interrogation came with rising spleen and accusation of tone.

"I asked to be allowed to come."
"Why?"

"Because I know that back of this prosecution lies the trickery of interests seeking to dispose of Anse Havey so that they may plunder his people."

The lawyer wheeled on the judge. "I must ask your honor to admonish this witness against such false and improper charges—or to punish her for contempt," he blazed furiously.

But the judge spoke without great severity as he cautioned: "Yes, the witness must not seek to imply motives to the prosecution."

If Juanita, however, was sustaining with no outward show of discomfort the savage onslaughts of a man trained in the art of confounding those who sat in the pillory of the witness chair, she was inwardly feeling need of holding her emotions masked and in check. As the questions became more and more personal, and she recognized in their trend the purpose of making her appear biased, she first flushed a little, then paled a little, but her voice betrayed no hint of annoyance.

The attorney took another step forward with a malicious smile. He paused that the next question and its answer might fall on the emphasis of a momentary silence. Then he pointed a finger toward the girl, with the manner of one branding a false witness, and demanded:

"Is there any sentimental attachment between you and this defendant, Anse Havey?"

There was a moment's dead silence in the courtroom, and Anse saw Juanita's face go white. Then he saw her finger nails whitened as they lay in her lap and a sudden flush spread to her face.

She looked toward the judge, and at once the lawyer for the defense was on his feet with the old objection: "The question is irrelevant."

Then, while counsel tilted with each other, the girl drew a long breath, and the man whose life was in the balance turned pale, too, not because of this, but because the woman he loved had been asked the question which was more to him than life and death—a question he had never dared to ask himself.

"I think," ruled the court, "the question is relevant as going to prove the credibility of the witness."

So she must answer.

The prisoner's finger nails bit into his palms and she smothered a low oath between his clenched teeth, but Juanita Holland only looked at the cross-examiner with a clear-eyed and serene glance of scorn under which he seemed to shrivel. She replied with the dignity of a young queen who can afford to ignore insults from the gutter.

"None whatever."

The defendant sat back in his chair and the smile left his lips as though he had been struck by a thunderbolt. He knew that his case was won, and yet as he saw her leave the witness stand and the courtroom, he felt sicker at heart than he had felt since he could remember. He would almost have preferred condemnation with the hope against hope left somewhere deep in his heart that there slept in hers an echo to his unuttered love.

The question he had never dared to ask she had answered—answered under oath, and liberty seemed now a very barren gift.

When he had been acquitted and was going out he saw a figure in consultation with the prosecutor—a figure which had not been inside the doors during the trial. It was Mr. Trevor of Louisville and he was testily saying: "Oh, well, there are more ways of killing a cat than by choking it with butter."

Anse Havey did not require the interpretation of an oracle for that cryptic comment. He knew that the effort to dispose of him would not end with his acquittal.

"Is There Any Sentimental Attachment Between You and This Defendant?"

Juanita was going away to enlist her staff of teachers and arrange for the equipment of the little hospital, and Anse did not tell her of his insecurity.

"You'll promise to be very careful while I'm gone, won't you?" she demanded, as they sat together the night before she left.

"I'll try to last till you get back," he smiled. He was sitting with a pipe in his hand—a pipe which had gone out and been forgotten.

In the darkness of the porch everything was vague but herself. She seemed to him to be luminous by some light of her own. She was a very wonderful and desirable star shining far out of reach of his world.

Suddenly she laughed, and he asked:

"What is it?"

"I was just thinking what a fool I was when I came here," she answered. "Did you know that I brought a piano with me as far as Peril? It's been there over a year."

"A piano!" he echoed, then they both laughed.

"I might as well have tried to bring along the Philadelphia city hall," she admitted. "Just the same, there have been times when it would have meant a lot to me, an awful lot, if I could have had that piano. I don't know whether music means so much to you, but to me—"

"I know," he broke in. "I sometimes 'low that life ain't much else except the summ'n' up of the things a feller dreams. Music is like dreams—it makes dreams. Yes, I know something about that."

She went away and, though she was not long gone, her absence seemed interminable to Anse Havey. He met her at the train on her return with a starved idolatry in his eyes, and together they rode back across the ridge.

But when she entered the building which had been the first schoolhouse the man drew back a step or two and watched as surreptitiously as a boy who has in due secrecy planned a surprise.

She went in and then suddenly halted and stood near the threshold in amazement. Her eyes began to dance and she gave a little gasp of delight. There against one wall stood her piano.

She turned to find Anse Havey waiting in the door as awkwardly as a green boy. Just how difficult a task it had been to bring that great weight across those roads untraveled she could only guess. He must, in effect, have built the roads before him as Napoleon built them for his armies.

She turned to him, deeply moved, and after the first flush of delight her eyes were misty.

"I wonder how I am ever going to thank you—for everything," she said softly.

But Bad Anse Havey only answered in an embarrassed voice: "I reckon it might be a little thingy, so I had a feller come up from Lexington and tune it up."

She went over and struck a chord, then she came back and laid a hand on his coat sleeve.

"I'm not going to try to thank you at all—now," she said. "But you go home and come back this evening and we'll have a little party, just you and I—with music."

"Good-by," he said. "I reckon ye haven't noticed it—but my rifle's standin' there in your rack."

It was a night of starlight with just a sickle moon overhead and the music of the whippoorwills in the air, when Anse presented himself again at the school. He knew that he must break off these visits because while she had been away he had taken due account of himself and recognized that the poignant pain of locked lips would drive him beyond control. He could no longer endure "the unit lamp and the ungirt loin." Now the sight of her set him into a palpitating fever and a burning madness. He would invent some excuse tonight and go away.

Then he came to the open door and stood on the threshold transfixed by the sight which greeted his eyes. His hat dropped to the floor and lay there.

He thought he knew Juanita. Now he suddenly realized that the real Juanita he had never seen before, and as he looked at her he felt infinitely far away from her. He was a very dim, faint star in apogee.

She sat with her back turned and her fingers straying over the keys of the piano—and she was in evening dress! The shaded lamp shone softly on ivory shoulders and a string of pearls glistened at her throat. Around her slim figure the soft folds of her gown fell like gossamer draperies and, to his eyes, she was utterly and flawlessly beautiful.

She had followed a whim that night and "dressed up" to surprise him. She had promised him a party and meant to receive him with as much preparation as she would have made for royalty. But to him it was only a declaration of the difference between them, emphasizing how unattainable she was; how unthinkably remote from him own rough world.

Then, as she heard his steps and rose, she was disappointed because in his face, instead of pleasure, she read only a tumult whose dominant note was distress.

"Don't you like me?" she asked, as she gave him her hand and smiled up at him.

"Like you!" he burst out, then he caught himself with something like a gasp. "Yes," he said dully, "I like you."

For a while she played and sang, and then they went out to the porch, where she sank down in the barrel-stave hammock which hung there and he sat in a split-bottom chair by her side.

He sat very moody and silent, his hands resting on his knees, trying to repress what he could not long hope to keep under.

She seemed oblivious to his deep abstraction, for she was humming some air low, almost under her breath.

But at last she sat up and laughed a silvery and subdued yet happy little laugh. She stretched her arms above her head.

"It's good to be back, Anse," she said softly. "I've missed you—lots."

He dared not tell her how he had missed her, and he did not recognize the new note in her voice—the heart note. There was a strange silence between them, and as they sat, so close that each could almost feel the other's breath, their eyes met and held in a locked gaze.

Slowly, as though drawn by some occult power over which he held no control, the man bent a little nearer, a little nearer. Slowly the girl's eyes dilated, and then, with no word, she suddenly gave a low exclamation, half gasp, half appeal, all inarticulate, and both hands went groping out toward him.

With something almost like a cry, the man was on his knees by the hamper, and both his arms were around her and her head was on his shoulder.

Then he was kissing her cheeks and lips, and into his soul was coming a sudden discovery with the softness and coolness of the flesh his lips touched.

It lasted only a moment, then she pushed him back gently and rose, while one bare arm went gropingly across her face and the other hand went out to the porch post for support.

In a voice low and broken she said: "You must go!"

"No!" he exclaimed, and took a step toward her, but she retreated a little and shook her head.

"Yes, dear—please," she almost whispered, and the man bowed in acquiescence.

"Good night," he said gravely, and picking up his hat, he started across the ridge.

But now there were no ghosts in his life, for all the way over that rough trail he was looking up at the stars and repeating incredulously over and over to himself: "She loves me!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

In a small room over the post office in Peril an attorney, whose professional success had always been precarious, received those few clients who came to him for consultation. The lawyer's name was Walter Hackley, but he was better known as Clayheel Hackley, because he never wore socks and his bare ankles were tanned to the hue of river-bank mud.

His features were wizened and his eyes shifty. He was a coward and an intriguer by nature and inclination. It was logical enough that when the verdict of the director's table that Bad Anse Havey was a nuisance filtered down the line the persons seeking native methods for abating the nuisance should come to Clayheel Hackley.

One day in August this attorney at law, together with Jim Fletcher and a tricky youth who enjoyed the distinction of holding office as telegraph operator at the Peril station, caucused together in Hackley's dingy room.

In the death of Bad Anse Havey this trio saw a joint advantage, since the abating of such a nuisance would not go unrewarded.

"Gentlemen," said the attorney, "his wizened face working nervously, "this business has need to be expeditious. Gentlemen—it requires, in its nature, to be expeditious. A few more failures and we are done for."

"Well, tell us how ye aims ter do hit," growled the telegraph operator.

"Jim Fletcher has the idea," replied the lawyer impressively. "Quite the right idea. How many men can you trust on a job like this, Jim?"

"As many as ye needs," was the confident response. "A dozen or a score if they're wanted."

"Enough to make it sure, but not too many," urged Hackley. "We should set a day precisely as the court would set a day for—an execution. The force you send out should simply stay on the job until it's done. If Anse Havey can be got alone, so much the better. But above all—"

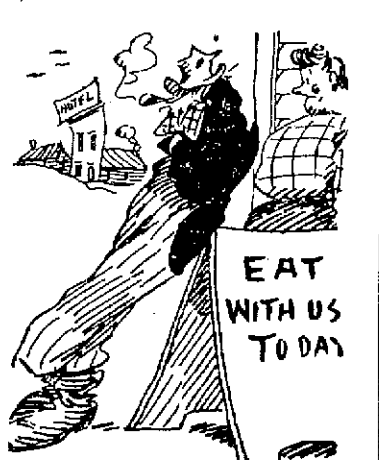

The lawyer paused and spoke with his most forceful emphasis: "Don't just wound this man. See that the thing is finally and definitely settled."

"I'll be there myself," Jim Fletcher assured him. "Now when is this day goin' ter be?"

"This is Monday," reflected the attorney. "There is no advantage in delay. It will take a day or two to get ready. Let the case be docketed, as I might say—for Thursday."

Anse Havey had gone to Lexington. Never again did he mean to hold against himself the accusation of "the unit lamp and the ungirt loin." He knew that she loved him.

"IT WAS RECOMMENDED BY MY DOCTOR"

The Reason Why So Many People Take Father John's Medicine for Body Building and Throat and Lungs

When Mrs. C. H. Dunkel, of 33 Linden street, Reading, Pa., was asked why she took Father John's Medicine for her cough, she replied, "It was recommended by my doctor." The same question was asked and a similar answer returned by the following:—Mrs. A. E. Hixon, 30 Larkin street, Bangor, Me.; Henry F. Villet, 25 Crown street, Meriden, Conn.; Frank Poff, Hallam, Pa.; Miss Catherine Doyle, 45 Blackburn street, Fairhaven, Mass.; Charles L. Brown, Irving, Ill., as well as a great many others.

Physicians, hospitals and other institutions all over the world endorse the merits of Father John's Medicine because they know its history and value.

It is best for colds, coughs and throat and lung troubles and it makes flesh and strength for those who are weak and run down. A doctor's prescription, free from alcohol and poisonous drugs in any form.

If you have an difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

HOPE GONE.

Mr. Newed—Now that we are one, I trust this is the last time you will wear low necked bathing suits.

Mrs. Newed—We may be one, but you are only half, and I shall dress my half as I like.

Dinner Stories

Mr. Deal, the undertaker, was never at a loss for an answer when anyone attempted to poke fun at him or his profession. One day a would-be wit, meeting him, remarked:

"Yours must be a grewsome business."

"If your honor pleases, I'd like to ness, Mr. Deal, I suppose you undertakers never look at a man without wishing him dead?"

"You are mistaken," replied the undertaker. "I know some people whom I would be perfectly willing to bury alive!"

get off the jury," said a jurymen to the judge just as the trial was about to begin.

"You can't get off now without a good reason," said the judge.

"I have a good reason," said the jurymen. "You must tell it, or serve," said the judge.

"But, your honor, I don't believe the other fellows would care to have me serve."

"Why not? Out with it! We haven't all day to fool."

"Well—I've got—got—I've got the"—stammered the embarrassed jurymen.

The judge, losing all patience, yelled: "What the devil have you got?"

"I've got the itch!" cried the poor fellow.

"Mr. Clerk," said the judge, "scratch that man out."

Couldn't Solve the Problem.

After retiring from business a certain man continued to maintain an office in a downtown building. He had no need of it and, furthermore was out of town almost all the time. A friend of his pointed out the inconsistency, and asked him why he didn't give up the office.

"I would," said the other, "but I don't know what to do with the rug."

Wheeler Street Man In a Bad Way. Many Janesville people will read with interest Mr. Lester's story of his recovery from annoying kidney ailments through the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. He tells of his experience to help other kidney sufferers here.

Read about it.

C. F. Lester, 1017 Wheeler street, Janesville, says: "I hadn't been feeling well for several months; my whole system seemed to be filled with uric poison. My whole body ached at times and it seemed to be swollen. I was dull and languid and had but little strength or energy. My kidneys didn't do their work right and I decided to try a kidney tonic. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they made me well."

Look First—Then Leap

A few months ago a certain Chicago woman decided to test her judgment on a business plan. Having an up-town parlor millinery shop, she planned a downtown salesroom, with the idea of specializing on $5.00 hats.

Her capital being well defined, she planned to forego pretentious street front quarters, and selected an upstairs shop in a centrally located building.

Her object in doing so was to assure herself a RESERVE FUND FOR ADVERTISING.

She advertised 3 times a week in the newspapers, and now, after 7 weeks of it, she is averaging a Saturday sale of something over 30 hats, and her business is paying all expenses, and growing constantly and rapidly.

Have YOU a sufficient advertising reserve?

Have you planned your business or your season with that reserve in mind?

Read the story of this woman's success as told in this issue by her manager, and then let us show you why a definite reserve is equally as necessary and as effective in your business.

Let us start now and make this a record season for you.

Money-Making Ways of Using Want Ads

No. 9—Exchange of Things You do Not Need for Things You Want

Sometimes you buy things that somebody "talks you into," or the purpose for which you bought them has ceased to exist.

This material is so much junk so far as any value to you is concerned, and yet there are others who are wondering how they can get what you have no further use for. And maybe they own just what you want!

State what you have and what you want—and name a number of choices, so that your opportunities of getting one of the things you wish have been broadened.

Here are a few suggestions along this line:

WANT AD NO. 1
WILL TRADE A BICYCLE IN good condition for a set of encyclopedias, typewriter or anything else useful. What have you? Write at once, and describe your offer. (Address)

WANT AD NO. 2
TO EXCHANGE—MOTORCYCLE. Cycle, 1914 model, in good condition, for dining room furniture, rugs or racks. Explain what you have, and reply to: (Address)

WANT AD NO. 3
WILL TRADE SET OF GOOD looking gloves for books, fishing tackle or anything else useful. What have you to offer? (Address)

WANT AD NO. 4
TO EXCHANGE—HORSE AND buggy. Horse is old, weight 350 pounds, buggy single-seated, rubber-tired. Bargain furniture or piano. (Address)

Just a few pennies will put you in touch with these people, and you can trade, without losing nearly as much as you would if you had to sell for cash.

You may have a lawn-mower, and recently moved into a flat. You may have a gun or fishing tackle, and no longer care to hunt and fish. You may have a horse and buggy, and have purchased a motor car. You may have a piece of encumbered property and want merchandise instead. There is scarcely any field that could be mentioned that does not present real chances of trading to your advantage, as well as to the other person's advantage.

As Good As Earning Money
Whenever you can exchange things that are of no use to you for things you can use, you are as much ahead as though you had earned money. Look around and see what you can exchange. Somebody else wants it—now!

a literary artist to tell of the big results which are possible through using these columns.

Either give the date, as near as possible, or send a clipping of

ENGLAND'S BUDGET SYSTEM DECLARED VERY EFFECTIVE

Claims That It Reaches the Pockets of Those Best Able to Pay and Those Able to Stand Increase.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Oct. 23.—The secrets of the new budget are out and the general opinion is that it is fair and reaches the pockets of those best able to pay as well as those who have hitherto not been directly affected. In the latter category are to be found the small wage earners who will now pay their cent or two through the increased tax on tea, cocoa and tobacco while the artisan who is now piling up an increased income by reason of the new tax on profits and the small farmer will be brought into line with other business people regarding income tax.

There has already been the usual outcry from certain classes but it is likely to be hit by the new taxes and several deputations are likely to keep the chancellor of the exchequer busy with their complaints for a time. The abolition of half-penny postage caused considerable dismay in the picture postcard trade and newspapers and publishers are also up in arms at the prospect of double postage bills for their daily papers as well as periodicals and magazines.

Hits Tea Trade.
In the tea trade it is expected that consumption will be on a rather small scale and that the price of tea in tea shops is said to be reduced.

The sugar caused a great outcry from consumers in the suburbs and provinces, as retailers put up their prices immediately. The budget was announced and many and bitter were the remarks fired at unfortunate managers of various retail stores. One of the surprises of the budget was the fact that the principal tax on millinery imported from Paris, men's hats being made up almost entirely from materials imported.

The tax on wine is likely to decrease the earning capacity of taxicabs, whose affairs are regulated by the home office, and may cause a revision in fares of the various motor-bus companies.

As far as the Stock Exchange is concerned gratitude was expressed that the increase was not greater, but it is at the same time being regarded as a new ebb at present will probably decrease, especially in those commercial undertakings which were brought in anticipation of increased dividends which will now be subject to special war tax on dividends.

Bankers Stumped.
The new method proposed by the chancellor of the exchequer for reducing income tax from the interest paid by bankers on current and deposit accounts is a minor matter when compared with the larger interests involved in the proposed changes to a banker writing in the financial papers, it creates difficulties. Broadly speaking, current accounts do not carry interest in London while they do in many provincial banks. In their terms of procedure on amounts with them. The withdrawal of interest maintained in London might lead, as it is possible that they would not be able to pay interest on their deposits and the balance in their accounts would be held in London. Such a result would be another blow to the supremacy of London in finance.

In some banks seen in the new tax on the collection thereof a serious increase in work for both inland revenue authorities and the already depleted staff of the banks.

CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION WILL BE INDICATIVE OF THE NATIONAL SENTIMENT

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, Oct. 23.—Three state and five congressional elections to be held Nov. 2 are looked to by national politicians here to furnish an indication of the present political sentiment of the country.

Perhaps the country's most watched contest is that for the governorship of Massachusetts. The present governor, David I. Walsh, democrat, is a favorite for reelection, and opposite him is former Congressman Samuel W. McCall.

Both parties have been using national issues to a large extent in their campaigns, and the result is expected to be an indication of the disposition of New England toward the two national parties.

O. W. Weller, republican, is running against E. C. Harrington, democrat, for the governorship of Maryland. Internal political strife has put this state in the republican rank. The republicans say they will hold it this year.

In Kentucky, normally a democratic state, Gov. A. O. Stanley is running for reelection against E. P. Morrow, democrat.

In the thirty-sixth New York congressional district left vacant by the death of Seneca Payne, Norman J. Gould, Seneca Payne, republican, is running against G. L. Licht, Geneva, democrat. Congressman Payne carried the district by 1,553 in 1914.

In the twenty-third district, New York City, W. S. Bennett, republican, is running against E. J. Healy, democrat. This district went democratic in 1914. In the twenty-first New York district, B. F. Small, republican, is opposing W. L. Allen, Malene, democrat. In 1914, the republicans carried this district by 620.

There will be elections to fill vacancies in the twenty-fourth Pennsylvania and fourth South Carolina districts.

The suffrage issue will come before the voters of four states—New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. Recent statements by President Wilson and members of his cabinet have given the suffragists strong hope for victory.

In several states there will be elections to county and other minor offices.

DEATH OF SIXTEENTH LORD PETRE ADDS NEW TRAGEDY TO HOUSE

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

London, Oct. 23.—The death of the sixteenth Lord Petre at the age of 24 years as the result of wounds received in France adds another tragedy to the sombre record of this noble house. There have been seven Lords Petre in 31 years. Thorndon Hall, the seat of the family, was burned down 40 years ago during the reign of Charles I. It was the romantic traditions of this house that inspired Miss Bradon to write "Lady Audley's Secret."

One of Lord Petre's ancestors was "the" Anne Boleyn. Another died in the tower at the instigation of Thomas Oates. A member of the family stole a lock of hair from Arabella Fermor, a frolic that led to a feud and to Ford's mockery of the affair in "The Rape of the Lock."

REFUTE ALLEGATION OF OVERCHARGE FOR STATE MADE TWINE

Statement from Governors' Office Corrects Story Regarding Raise in Prices.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., October 23.—In order that the erroneous impressions scattered broadcast about the state by an article bearing the name of H. Greenwood of Friendship concerning the Prison Twine Plant might be corrected, this statement has been given out from the office of the governor.

Incidentally, it has been determined that the article in all probability was not written by Mr. Greenwood, but was prepared by the press bureau which is under the control of the governor.

Mr. Greenwood is a former twine salesman who was discharged. At the time the article referred to was published he was employed by the Wisconsin Twine Plant.

In this article Mr. Greenwood is made to intimate that the farmers of Wisconsin will pay this year about $200,000 through the raise in the price of twine, a statement which is entirely untrue.

The books of the Twine Plant show this to be absolutely untrue. In the first place, a comparison of the old and new prices shows that Sisal and Standard twine has risen from $1.00 to one-half cent to seven and one-half cents a pound, figuring car load lots, which is a fair basis. On X Standard twine there was a raise of three-quarters of a cent a pound.

The new price list went into effect April 28, 1915. The Equity Societies of the state, however, had contracted for large amounts of twine prior to the new price list.

Philip and the Board of Control will be the state should live up to its contracts. Therefore, in figuring the additional cost to purchasers within the state, the twine raised by the Equity Societies was taken into account.

These contracts called for 34,400 pounds of Sisal, 134,625 pounds of Standard, 52,100 pounds of X Standard, 10,400 pounds of Climax and 113,150 pounds of Premium twine.

The sales made from the new price list after April 28, 1915, within the state, aggregated 399,500 pounds and cost $39,950. The twine delivered to the Equity Societies under the old contract.

The classification of these sales was as follows: Sisal, 34,750 pounds; Standard, 134,625 pounds; X Standard, 52,100 pounds; Climax, 10,400 pounds; Premium, 89,500 pounds.

The sales out of the state, under the new price list, aggregated 392,500 pounds and cost $39,250. The twine delivered to the Equity Societies under the old contract.

Greenwood, or whoever wrote the article, would claim that it had cost farmers of Wisconsin money when the twine was sold outside the state at a price to pay for lost cost. This is entirely untrue.

We find, therefore, that a raise of one cent a pound was paid on 34,750 pounds of Sisal twine, which would amount to $347.50.

The twine sales of Standard under the new price list show a raise of one cent per pound shows an increased cost to the consumer of $1,966.00.

There was no raise in the price of X Standard, might be added, an amount sold under the Equity contracts, which would bring the amount of twine sold under the old price list up to 430,000 pounds and would reduce the amount sold under the new price list to 357,500 pounds.

Wisconsin purchases of Climax twine under the new price list, with a raise of one cent per pound, aggregated 37,900 pounds, an increased cost to the consumer in the state of $379.00.

In Wisconsin of Premium twine under the new price list, at a raise of three-fourths of a cent a pound show an increased cost to the consumer of $874.62.

It is shown, therefore, that the total increased cost to the Wisconsin consumer because of the new price list, effective April 28, is $3,177.62, much less than $200,000.

This is on an aggregate sale to Wisconsin dealers of 799,550 pounds of twine.

The information is made in the so-called Greenwood article that while Wisconsin raised the price of its twine and therefore protected its farmers, it is not to be supposed that the claim will be made that Minnesota made money for its taxpayers by selling twine below Wisconsin or any other state. However, the records of the Minnesota Twine Plant will show that their output was sold in advance at the old price, and that a consumer or dealer would find upon application that the price was still the same, but that there was no twine to be had.

The International Harvester and the Plymouth Cordage Company together produce 85 per cent of the twine made in the United States. The output of the Wisconsin State Price is about 1.5 per cent of the production of the International Harvester Company. The proportion of the Wisconsin output to that of the Plymouth Cordage Company is 7 per cent and the Wisconsin practically dominates the market of the country, is 2.5 per cent.

It has been intimated in the so-called Greenwood article that the raise in price of prison twine in Wisconsin is hardly fair to assume, however, that the act of Wisconsin's twine plant would affect the price of this enormous output of twine sold all over the United States and these companies.

The new price list, which went into effect April 28, 1915, was the result of an investigation of the Twine Plant which showed that twine was sold at a price which was less than the cost to the state.

A statement was made by a representative of the Equity Society that the farmers of the state did not expect to ask the Twine Plant to further its production below cost, and further did not object to a small profit.

It was stated that the farmers realized that if the Twine Plant continued its operation at a loss the twine might cost them more than the twine they were now paying for.

The governor found that the Twine plant was losing money. The twine sold to him showed a loss for the fiscal year of $63,600. He does not feel himself commissioned to spend the money of the tax payers in such a manufacturing enterprise. He feels confident that the voters of the state do not want to be supplied with twine at a price below cost, and that the twine plant should be sold to the people. Misstatements concerning state business, such as above referred to, can be answered by figures that speak the truth and it is going to be done.

TURKO SOLDIER IS GIVEN LEGION OF HONOR FOR BRAVERY

Paris, Oct. 23.—The first and only trooper of the Turcos, or French black troops from Senegal and Algeria to receive the Legion of Honor from the French government, is a thick-set, coal-black, middle-aged infantryman who went through one of the queer experiences of the war. While operations were active at the front, a short time ago, it was determined to fall back from a given point, and this Turk was given the small steel safe containing 50,000 francs to carry back to the rear.

He was given a donkey and started off with the safe and treasure. Suddenly, however, all the plans were interrupted by a German raid, which swept the Turcos and all other troops, with their horses and supplies, into the utmost confusion. Many were killed and the Turk was badly injured.

It was taken for granted that the Turk with the safe and treasure was certainly lost, as even those not burdened with heavy loads had been swept away in the impetuous raid.

Some days later the French outposts were astonished to have the Turk, with the safe on his back, trudge into camp. His donkey had been killed, and for three days he had been hiding in the woods, carrying a steel safe on his back. He never let go of the safe. When the Turk lines were swept into confusion, the machine gun fire, he first hid his donkey and then the safe in a secret place among bushes.

The German lines rushed past his hiding place and he was left behind the German lines. He kept concealed during the night and in the light of the dawn he picked his way forward through the German rear guard to some new hiding place. This was kept up until at last he trudged into the French camp and laid down the safe and treasure before the astonished French colonel.

They gave him the Legion of Honor, and the whole regiment was drawn up to receive him. The colonel, representative of the government, who gave him the accolade or kiss of honor on his coal-black face.

Newspaper Advertising Brings Prompt Success

Opens Millinery Shop With Liberal Proportion of Capital Reserved For Newspaper Display.

Seven Weeks of Advertising Establishes Success of Unique Idea in Hat Selling.

(By Andrew L. Deming.)

Millinery shops have been "sung in song and story," to say nothing of dramatized and set to music, as the frequent abode of beauty and romance. But had we set about to find an instance of heroism, that is probably one of the places we shouldn't have looked for it.

And so, when the time comes when we shall sit with frost tinged, and mightily want we predict, locks, and have our turn at thrusting unwelcome wedges into the crevices of our heads, we are only the more certain that one of the things we shall insist upon his admitting frequently is that it is the unexpected we should always be looking out for, and that logical courses and events have to do principally with fiction.

Also that one of the best ways of cheating yourself out of a lot of interesting bits of information and experience is to take things for granted.

Which is what we might have done one afternoon this week when elbowing our way into a tiny shop jammed with hats and with apparently enthusiastic

"I am the manager," said one who formed the center of a small group. "But I'm afraid you will have to see some morning before shopping hours. If it is for any length of time."

"Another fellow hit on a lucky idea," we said to ourselves, not without envy, as we pushed the "down" button of the elevator shaft outside the shop door.

But we went back, before shopping hours, and it isn't another "fellow," it is a woman, who has been wise to interview many of the other affairs, but we would be hard put to it to recall one of them possessed of a more capable, convincing personality than that of Mrs. Bertha Miller, the manager of this little shop.

It was an interesting story she told us, of the misfortune and struggles of another self-supporting woman, and of her untiring courage and even daring.

"The woman who owns this little place," she said, "was for years employed in various shops here in Chicago, principally as a designer."

"Then a few years ago, she lost her hearing! That naturally put the selling end out of the question, and finally made it impossible to work for others. She was forced to find employment for herself, and for her two children, as she was not a rule very lenient or considerate toward such inconveniences or annoyances."

Eventually she opened a parlor and sewing shop, and was successful, and she is still conducting it, far up on the north side of town.

"For a long time she had contented that the day of the over-privileged hat maker, principally the women, wearing cheaper hats decidedly and consistently for several years."

"Establishes $5.00 Hat Shop." Hats that used to sell for fifteen and eighteen dollars have been selling for ten and twelve, and the manager decided that the day of the five dollar hat had arrived.

The idea came to her of establishing a store that should sell hats for five dollars or less, nothing over five.

"While she had a certain amount of capital laid away, it did not permit an undertaking of any great magnitude, she decided to open a hat shop in a new, well patronized building in the heart of the shopping district, and with window space in its arcade, so that she might retain a proper reserve for advertising."

"Pretty clear thinking for a woman, don't you think so?" with a smile, "Not bad," we returned. "But why for a woman?"

"I can't know, only I thought they weren't supposed to appreciate the value of advertising to the extent that men do. But the successful ones do. I can assure you."

Advertising Expenses Assured. "Well, that was the idea behind this shop. The hats are made in the North Side shop, this is simply a sales room. She has installed every device for advertising, and every device for the most for the least money, and of advertising the fact prominently."

"The place has been in existence a scant two months, and during that time she has advertised at least three times a week in the newspapers. People came to buy from curiosity, but they stayed to buy."

Advertising Made Business Pay From Start. "Business starts are always slow of course, but we can only judge of our success here by the record of these past weeks. It is so small that we say that our advertising has permitted us to at least break even on expenses, including the advertising, from the very start. It is looking forward to a successful season, and in believing that the soundness of the owner's judgment is confirmed."

Small Expenses and Big Advertising Brings Return. "Conditions are constantly changing in the millinery business, as in all others. It was when a woman bought a hat in the spring and the fall, and wore the same one an entire season. That gave the milliners only a few business or money making months in the year."

"Michelsons, a woman wants an expensive hat, that she can wear until she tires of it, and then feel able to replace it. While of course this results in closer profits, it also results in practically year round millinery season and much better total annual results."

"Then another thing, it is interesting to watch the growing number of up-to-date people. People are realizing more and more that advertising is more essential and effective than extravagant display."

"I don't mean to minimize the value of display, but merely to illustrate that, as in this instance, where the amount of capital is well defined, the wise course is to retain an advertising reserve, even at the sacrifice of imposing quarters."

"Our sales have risen from day to day. Naturally, but our Saturday business is averaging something over thirty hats, after about seven weeks of advertising."

"So we feel we're on the right track; holding down costs and expenses to a point that permits offering people more than they ordinarily get for their money, and that also permits us to keep our hats and our offers constantly and attractively before their notice in the newspapers."

Outrageously Funny. "I'll never again invite that professional humorist to dinner," exclaimed Mrs. Newlyriche. "Why, he made me an English butler laugh."—Philadelphia Ledger.
